Seeking the Music of the Personal and the Communal By Rabbi David Kosak

Music has always captivated me. One Hanukkah, I requested and received a digital clock radio. I loved turning the manual dial, seeking out different stations, songs and styles of music. That's how I discovered the Velvet Underground and Lou Reed at an early age. When I was old enough to sit still, my parents took me regularly to the symphony at Lincoln Center. Such pageantry—all that shining brass, musicians dressed in tuxedos and anticipating those rare moments when the cymbals would clang!

In junior high school, my tastes turned quite eclectic. On the one hand, I was partial to bands like Led Zeppelin, Iron Butterfly, and the Doors. Simultaneously, my allowance was spent on jazz musicians like Pat Metheny, Dave Brubeck, John Coltrane, and Chick Corea.

Around that time, my family “adopted” a Jewish refusenik family. The mother and son were permitted to leave the Soviet Union. They left with almost no worldly possessions. Yet on my bar mitzvah, Dmitri and Larissa parted with one of the few things they owned—a boxed set of Tchaikovsky's symphonies with Russian liner notes. I practically wore out the vinyl listening repeatedly.

Over the past four years, I have been learning to sing. Although my musical appreciation started early with that clock radio, being musical did not. Indeed, I was one of those people who was told, “David, don't sing.” My first two years of voice training were more about psychology than musicality. I had to teach myself that everyone has a voice, and that included me.

Music is all about one's voice. Many times, we will come across the phrase of “finding one's voice.” This is a very American model. It assumes that hidden within us is our authentic, worthy voice. If we can just chip away at all the false stuff on top, we will find our true self, and therefore our own unique music.

My own experiences have taught me that we don't find a voice so much as develop one. We begin to learn how our voice functions, how to control and shape our air and how it flows through the body. Our voice is thus just another sort of relationship we have with ourselves and with those around us. The quality of our voice is in good measure a reflection of how much energy and presence we put into that relationship.

This idea is not original to me. Rabbi Nahman of Bratslov, who certainly possessed a unique and individual voice, once wrote:

Know that every shepherd has a unique melody (niggun) according to the grasses and the place where he herds, for every animal has a grass unique to her that she needs to eat. Also a shepherd isn't always in one place, and according to the grasses and the place where he herds, so he has a niggun... and from the song of the grasses is made the niggun of the shepherd.

What an interesting concept! The shepherd's song is influenced by the very grasses of a place, by their relationship with sheep and the natural world in which they find themselves. In wine terminology, we might say that songs and our own voice have “terroir,” that they are, in part, an expression of our own geography. Before the age of global communication (and even now), one could tell a Brazilian Samba from a Romani folk song.

Jewish music is much the same. Sephardic musicality is clearly different than Ashkenazic. Yet even within the Ashkenazic world, there is tremendous variety. The first time I heard a Londoner chant Torah it took my breath away. It was majestic, powerful AND different.

For a congregation, what matters is our collective voice. That's no easy thing in a large and diverse community like ours. Nonetheless, that's what people mean when they speak of “traditional” tunes.

Joyful Noise

Rabbi's Corner

By Rabbi Eve Posen

What follows was a real exchange with my daughter Shiri after a particularly joyful Kabbalat Shabbat service recently. “Mommy, let’s play shul. I’ll be Cantor Eyal, and you be the people. Repeat after me: L’chu l’chu l’chu.” This filled me with so much joy. The songs of Kabbalat Shabbat (Friday night services) are the basis of so many of my childhood memories, so to hear my daughter embrace them as well just touched my soul.

What’s interesting is that it’s not these melodies that take me back. Shiri is hearing melodies that are new to me and to many of us. The words are the same, but the melodies have changed. We all have our own idea of what the “traditional” melody is for certain prayers. We get stuck in the thought process of “This is the way it is and must always be because that’s how we’ve always done it.” We never seem to remember that what is now “traditional” was once new too and only became “tradition” after many years of use. The words of our written prayers are never changing; instead it is the melodies that can refresh, renew, or even jar us just enough to make us sit up and pay attention.

I always laugh when I hear someone refer to a melody as the “traditional melody” because most of the melodies we sing today were written in the 20th century. Our beloved “traditional” Oseh Shalom? That’s from 1973, the same year that gave us Crocodile Rock and Bad, Bad Leroy Brown. Anything by Rabbi Shlomo Carlebach of course came from the 1960s and 70s. And yet, somehow these modern tunes put to ancient words have become the gold standard.

As we venture into a new chapter of Jewish music at Neveh Shalom, it’s important to remember that the words, which don’t change, should leave us feeling just as inspired as whatever tune they are set to. While the deep emotional response we have to certain melodies might take us back to a certain time in our lives, we will never run out of opportunities to make new musical memories.

They are expressing the “terroir” of their own Jewish experience. Yet, as Rabbi Nahman hinted, our congregational music and singing is and must be in constant evolution. Otherwise, it becomes something lifeless and detached.

This is one of the most exciting times to be a Jew. We live in a world of constantly changing landscapes. No matter what part of the Jewish world one inhabits, whether Ultra-Orthodox or Renewal, Judaism continues to adjust to modern times. At Neveh Shalom, we understand that. As Cantor Bitton integrates himself into our kehillah and begins to offer us some themed Shabbats, our own musical culture will continue to develop. Like the shepherd, his voice will do the same as it adjusts to us.

It was King David, our poet-musician-warrior who said it best. Shiru la’shem shir chadash. Sing a new song to God. I look forward to doing that with you.

Enchantingly,
Rav D

Cantor's Musical Programming Unveiled

Cantor's Corner

By Cantor Eyal Bitton

I want to offer Neveh Shalom and the community at large an annual musical season entitled WORDS & MUSIC – For the Heart & Soul.

The season will include a series of programs which will take place during services and a series of programs which will take place outside of services – some are for the heart and some are for the soul. You can read more in depth about these programs on pages 10-11.

The first two programs will launch this February.

On Saturday, February 3, we'll begin with a Saturday morning themed service called Folk Music Shabbat. I've adapted a number of our liturgical texts to well known folk music melodies by the likes of Bob Dylan, Pete Seeger, and others. You'll enjoy "naming that tune," hearing a slightly different take on how to listen to some of our prayers, and, well, it'll just be fun!

On Thursday, February 15, I can't wait to share my extremely popular musical lecture Jewish TV Theme Songs. This presentation was originally launched during Toronto Jewish Music Week in 2015 and was the hit lecture of the festival. It'll be a wonderful trip down memory lane, and you'll love learning which Jewish composers wrote those beloved TV theme songs you grew up with. There'll be plenty of videos and sing-along moments to make this a truly engaging and fun evening.

There will be a mix of light and serious programs, of course.

In the spring, I'll present a varied mix of musical offerings. There will be another musically-themed service in which I underline great Jewish liturgical music. It's what I call a Heritage Shabbat. We highlight beautiful Jewish music and learn where these specific melodies came from. There will also be a large-scale concert which I will talk about more as we get closer to the date.

As we look to the future, I will have more musical programming that will involve members of our community, youth and adults. I have specific programs for youth and adults in the service and in concerts.

To make these events a true success, I need members of the congregation to help. I invite you to contact me and join my music committee so that we can work together to make Neveh Shalom a center of Jewish music in Portland.

Updates from Steve

President's Corner

By Stephen Blake

The High Holy Days marking the beginning of the year 5778 are behind us. This year brought a number of changes to the celebration of the New Year at CNS. The first and major change was the arrival of Cantor Eyal Bitton. In addition, there were a number of other changes that were necessitated by clergy availability or our efforts to meet our congregation's desire to be with Cantor Bitton. As we have done in the past, we followed up the HHD services with a request that our members give us their feedback through a survey sent to the entire congregation. While we would have liked everyone to reply, we are pleased that over 250 congregants did, and the response has been overwhelmingly positive. That said, there were a number of critiques. This information has been shared with our clergy and staff, and will be an integral part of our planning for next year.

We also informed the congregation that our Senior Rabbi was due for a contract renewal and asked for your approval to move forward with this process. The response for Rabbi Kosak has been extremely positive with over 90% of the responses being a "yes." The personnel committee did inform the Rabbi of our desire to renew his contract, and we expect that by the time you read this that will have been completed.

Since its founding, Camp Solomon Schechter has had a special relationship with Congregation Neveh Shalom. This relationship stems from the camp's affiliation with the Conservative Movement and the fact that our Senior Rabbi Emeritus, Rabbi Stampfer, was instrumental in its inception. This relationship has taken the form of both our financial support as well as urging our families to consider going to camp. The Board has decided that we will maintain our special relationship with this camp. As part of this decision, the Board has also decided to allow other Jewish camps to present to our families, but no camp presentations will be made during school hours.

I will continue to use this column to update our congregation on the issues before the Board. We are also interested in what you have to say. Please do not hesitate to contact any of our clergy or staff, or me directly at president@nevehshalom.org.

Upcoming B'nai Mitzvah

Rebecca Tenner, January 6

Becca is the daughter of Gary and Maizy Tenner, and little sister to Jillian. She is the grandchild of Shirley Tenner (Delray Beach, FL) and Michael Dunn and Cynthia Smith (Portland, OR). Becca is an active 7th grader at Three Rivers Charter School and her favorite subject is social studies. For the last four years she's been in team dance at Van De Veere Dance Academy, competing in hip-hop, jazz, and ballet. She also enjoys running for the Rosemont Ridge Middle School Cross Country Team. Becca is routinely recognized for her positive attitude, bright smile and kindness to peers. In her spare time she enjoys hanging out with friends and family, creating YouTube videos, vacationing in Mexico, and visiting her Camp Solomon Schechter friends during the school year. This summer will be her 6th year of camp!

Ellianna Foster is the daughter of Aviva Brandt and Scott Foster and granddaughter to Cookie and Sid Brandt (Chicago) and Marlys and Melvin Foster (Pasco, WA). Ellie is an outstanding seventh grader at Jackson Middle School, where she plays tenor saxophone in band. She is a competitive artistic roller skater, who brought home two silver medals from the 2017 National Artistic Roller Skating Championships. Ellie is happiest when she is engrossed in a book or making music on piano, saxophone or clarinet. She also participates in her family's art business by doing pyrography to raise money to go to China in June in a school exchange program.

Sophia Gilbert – February 16

Sophia Gilbert is the daughter of Robb and Bari Gilbert, and older sister to Ethan, Jordan, Mickey, and Trevor. Proud grandparents are Marsha and Joel Gilbert (Portland, OR), John and Marcia Grado (St. Johns, FL), and Morton and Carol Greenfield (Boyton Beach, FL). Sophia is a kind and loving 8th grader at Fowler Middle School, where she is a member of the Advanced Choir. When she's not singing or obsessing over anime videos, she enjoys drawing. Lots of nachas to her family on her upcoming simcha.

Ethan Gilbert and Jordan Mickey Gilbert – February 17

Ethan and Jordan Gilbert are the sons of Robb and Bari Gilbert, brothers to Sophia and Trevor. Proud grandparents are Marsha and Joel Gilbert (Portland, OR), John and Marcia Grado (St. Johns, FL), and Morton and Carol Greenfield (Boyton Beach, FL).

Ethan is hard working as a 7th grader at Fowler Middle School. When he's not playing trumpet, involved in after-school clubs, basketball, Boy Scouts, video games, or volunteering as an ambassador for kindergarteners, he's on the baseball mound or making plays at 3rd. Ethan also excels as a soccer goalie and in the classroom. Mazel Tov on his upcoming simcha.

Jordan is a 7th grader at Fowler Middle School where his favorite subject is science. His commitment to friends and his community is strong, evident in his recent graduation to Private in the Young Marines. He also enjoys WWI history, cross country, gaming, and Boy Scouts. Mazel tov as he becomes a bar mitzvah.

Shayah Kosak – February 24

Shayah Kosak is the son of Rabbi David and Laura Kosak, older brother to Amitai, grandson of Judy and Al z"l Kosak (New Rochelle, NY), Marilyn Beck (Pacific Grove, CA), and Vern Beck (Portland, OR). Shayah is a 7th grader at Portland Jewish Academy where he enjoys every subject, and in particular math and science. He's a recent attendee and big fan of Camp Solomon Schechter. He enjoys watching football and basketball and playing both (flag football). For his Bar Mitzvah project, Shayah has been recruiting new members for a non-profit called This is My Earth (www.this-is-my-earth.org) which buys areas of land around the world and preserves them, enabling the local endangered and vulnerable animals to have an undisturbed home. Membership is only $1 minimum – it's not too late to sign up! Shayah is passionate about protecting the environment and safeguarding biodiversity. His parents and entire family are proud of him and love watching him grow up.

Connecting the Generations Through Music and Prayer

By Mel Berwin, Director of Congregational Learning

ing us in the songs of our people—is there a more powerful symbol of the miraculous continuity of our tradition throughout the ages? And while our kids may not relate to the specific theological ideas or textual resonance of the words they are singing, there are many good reasons for them to learn, sing, and lead these prayers. Here are a few ways we talk to children about prayer:

Prayer is how we talk to God. We can have a conversation with God in any language and in any words we choose. And yet, there is something both powerful and comforting about using language that we know has been used for generations, by our own family members and our people throughout the world and throughout the ages, to convey their deepest hopes, frustrations, gratitude, and requests to God. Just like skills to cope with stress or anger, it helps to practice our words of prayer when we don't need them, so that we know what to say when we do need them.

Jewish community shows up for each other. Our religion isn't one of individual quest, it's one of communal gathering. Just by showing up at services, we help to make a minyan, we let mourners know we are there for them, we celebrate milestones with each other, we raise our voices together in song. We never know what is in the heart of someone sitting next to us, but when we show up and participate in a service, we provide strength and hope to others, and we build connection with each other.

Feeling at home in Judaism. We always come back to this idea in ALIYAH. We want our kids to feel at home in Judaism, and knowing the prayers and tunes of our people is one essential way of connecting to our community rituals.

Moreover, when our children have learned the songs of our people from their earliest years, those tunes will stay with them forever, and provide a foundation of memory and connection, to Judaism and to each other, for years to come.

Music fundamentally connects us to emotion, to language acquisition, and to memory, making singing an incredibly powerful tool for education, especially in a setting like ours, where we are building not just skills but connection, to each other and to our culture. We sing throughout the year—traditional and contemporary holiday songs, Alef-Bet and other learning songs, and of course, the prayers of our services. As I write this, our ALIYAH K-6th graders are about to help lead the songs and prayers of our Friday evening Shabbat service.

From Kindergarteners bouncing up and down to Bim-Bam-Shabbat-Shalom and Oseh Shalom, to our oldest students leading the ancient words of Mi Chamocha and Aleinu, I am always moved to hear children lead-

Making Music

Music in CNS Member's Lives

By Jenn Director Knudsen

Most of us make music. Some sing like an opera diva, in the shower; others play piano like a maestro, as long as the vacuum is running. For others, making music is an inborn talent that's part of everyday life, both Jewish and secular. The three CNS musicians featured here make beautiful music. No need for running water or electrical appliances to muffle their melodies.

Itai Dewar is a teacher of 5th graders in the CNS' ALIYAH program and in Machon Ivrit for adult learners of Hebrew. He also is a very spiritual and multifaceted musician.

He has sung in choirs, madrigal groups, and jazz ensembles, and he knows the academics of music, too, having studied music theory, counterpoint, and orchestration in college. He's played and studied piano in this country and abroad, including in Israel.

And, he says in his typical self-deprecating manner, "My admittedly shaky grasp of guitar, banjo, and ukulele plunking has not prevented me from attempting to amuse my 5th graders or, previously, when I served in the Peace Corps in Jordan."

Dewar recalls, "Among my earliest memories is the wonder and sense of reverence I felt attending a Latin Mass with my father. The incense and Gregorian chants pointed to a mystery beyond words."

The wordless power of music followed him into Judaism. He recounts that while studying years ago in yeshiva, "I often found that the community and, in particular, text study, frequently left me baffled and feeling a little too much like a cultural anthropologist." By contrast, he says, "The wordless melodies of niggunim somehow served as a portal to transcendence."

The spiritual nature of music also is profound for Sharon Fendrich, a trained classical pianist and vocalist who first tickled the ivories at age three. A professional composer and recording artist of music that marries New Age with Neoclassical, she also is Rose Schnitzer Manor's assistant choir director and knows her way around the bima at Neveh Shalom.

"Chanting the Rosh Hashanah haftarah of Hannah two years ago was a pivotal moment in my musical history," says Fendrich, mom of two ALIYAH students. "Everything came together in one moment," she says of the union between song and prayer.

"When all is said and done, my motivations as a musician come from my spirit, the same place as my motivations when in prayer," Fendrich says. Listen to this connection at www.dreamlandproductions.com.

Israeli Shlomo Farber, ALIYAH teacher, grew up immersed in everything Jewish, musically, too. Jewish and Israeli folk songs were his childhood soundtrack.

A largely self-taught pianist who plays mainly by ear, Farber says the music -- more than religious overtones -- is his draw.

"If you asked me the question, 'What role did music play in your life as a child,' a few years ago, maybe you'd have to ask instead, 'What part does life play in my music?'"

For the Heart and

Cantor Eyal Bitton Brings a New Musical Vision to CNS

by Debra Shein

“A cantor is a shaliach tzibur, an emissary of the congregation. In today’s synagogue, that definition has taken on new meaning. To be an emissary of a modern-day congregation means to be an ambassador to Jewish prayer and cultural identity — in particularly through music. A cantor must seek to create opportunities for congregants to connect to t’fillah and to a sense of belonging to one’s synagogue, one’s community, one’s people, and one’s heritage.” — Cantor Eyal Bitton

Radiating enthusiasm for his job, the congregation, and the potential to amp up CNS’s presence on the local Jewish music scene, our new cantor sits in his office on a rainy fall afternoon, slightly apprehensive about the fabled oh-so-wet Oregon winter ahead, but eager to dig in and get started on bringing his musical vision for our community to life.

Since his arrival in August, shortly before the holiday season, he has pretty literally had to “hit the ground running” in his first months in Portland. He’s excited about putting his philosophy about the role of a cantor, as expressed above, into action at Neveh Shalom. With this in mind, he has conceived a program he calls “Music for the Heart and Soul.” As he explains, “programs that take place during services address the needs of the soul; programs to take place outside of services address the needs of the heart. These are designed to involve adults and youth as well.”

In addition to carrying out the foundational tasks of his position, including managing the b’nei mitzvah program, attending other life-cycle events, and leading services, Cantor Bitton proposes to employ his many talents to bring innovation and variety to the musical life of the congregation, and to make Neveh Shalom a prime venue for Jewish musical events in the region. His background as a composer, playwright, and musical director, as well as his previous work as a cantor, have amply prepared him to fulfill these goals. In addition, his multicultural background has well equipped him to form bridges to the larger community.

The cantor’s mother was an Ashkenazi Jew whose parents had both fled from Germany to London, where they met.

They later moved together to Montreal. His father’s parents, Sephardic Jews who spoke Judeo-Arabic, emigrated from Morocco to Montreal in the 1950s. After their marriage, the cantor’s parents moved to Zaire (now the Democratic Republic of the Congo), where his father was an electrical engineer and was in charge of broadcasting the famous “Rumble in the Jungle” between George Foreman and Muhammed Ali. It was here that the cantor spent his earliest years. Friends included an international mix of expats plus native African people. Cantor Bitton’s first languages were French and Lingala; he didn’t start learning English until he went to school. After returning to Canada, the Bittons resettled in Montreal, where Eyal eventually earned a degree in Jewish Studies from McGill University and went on to build his career. His musical oratorios have been produced in Canada, the US, Kenya, and China.

In his “music for the soul” part of the program, Cantor Bitton plans to provide an array of opportunities for both youth and adults to become involved. He’s been astounded by the “unexpected boon” of having such a large talent pool here at CNS. His aim is to enhance services by making them even more spiritually meaningful and musically engaging. This will include the development of a youth choir and teen leaders, youth High Holiday leadership, song- and poetry-writing contests, Friday Night Live events with a live band, a musical heritage series to better acquaint us with the full range of global and historical Jewish music, Saturday Morning Fever services set to popular melodies, and more.

Cantor Bitton particularly relishes opportunities to educate the congregation and the community about “contemporary Jewish music and also the roots of traditional Jewish music.” He enthusiastically relates that he’d “like to pepper the traditional Ashkenazi service with Sephardic, Moroccan, popular, and original elements in a seamless fashion. We have a rich Jewish musical tradition, and we’re better if we’re exposed to it all and not just think ‘That’s what they do.’” side of the program, the cantor hopes to provide an intriguing and wide-ranging variety of activities. These include large events such as major concerts featuring local and international performers, the presentation of original works written by the cantor himself (including an oratorio recounting the five-millennia history of the Jewish people), community productions of musicals or revues, and the presentation of musical numbers from Jewish-themed films featuring select professional soloists. Plans also include smaller events such as teen talent concerts, musical lectures, and sing-alongs. In addition, there are plans for an online video channel which would include both Jewish music videos and filmed discussions of multiple cantors debating questions of interest pertaining to their work.

Likewise, on the “music for the heart”

“All of this,” the cantor says, “is about imparting a positive connection to Judaism, particularly the synagogue experience (that which is associated with the build-

When I teach... I want people to really connect, [and I] want to impart a passion for Judaism and Jewish music.

ing of Neveh Shalom). When I teach kids in Hebrew school or have people around the seder table, I want people to really connect, want to impart a passion for Judaism and Jewish music. When I teach kids, I tell them that while singing is a component of the service, it’s not American Idol; it’s not about the quality of the voice, but learning to participate actively in prayer and in a leadership capacity. It’s about feeling a sense of achievement for having done Torah, etc. When they come to this building and meet the clergy, it needs to be a positive experience. We want them to feel proud to be Jewish and happy about this attachment. What is community if not an extended family? Today we are that village, that shtetl of old, that used to exist.”

“Stay tuned,” Cantor Bitton says, “services are going to become musically very exciting, and I think we’re going to have a very dynamic presence outside the service as well, a very dynamic experience of Jewish music.” To help further develop and carry out this vision, the cantor would like to create a music committee composed of interested members. If you’d like to get involved in what promises to be an exciting musical future, please contact him and let him know. Call the office or email ebitton@nevehshalom.org.

Song Leader Boot Camp

By Eadie Kaltenbacher

Imagine you are a relatively new guitarist getting ready to lead Jewish songs with an audience of more than 100 expectant faces. How do you feel? If you're Leah Conley, you answer "Thrilled!" Of course, her audience is more forgiving of mistakes, because as the youngest learners in our community, they learn from their own mistakes every day. Her audience is the one- to five-year-old crowd at Foundation School, where she is the Director of Education.

Leah attended Songleader Boot Camp (SLBC) in 2016 to become inspired by leaders in the world of Jewish music. She wanted to learn more about leading with music for preschool education. One of Leah's big takeaways from SLBC is that everybody, no matter how old they are, always has to start at the beginning when they are learning a new skill – and making mistakes is an integral part of the learning process. SLBC pushed her to try new challenges, and as she becomes a more experienced musician, she is working to continue her education, including taking guitar lessons from Neveh Shalom's own Gabe Lawler.

Gabe, in addition to being a skilled guitarist and musician, is Neveh Shalom's Kadima/USY advisor and leader of Hineiinu (for young Jewish graduates and professionals). He attended SLBC in 2015 when he was running the music program at a summer camp in Michigan. Gabe's primary role at the camp was to "bring ruach" into music at the camp, combining old favorites with new variations. His experience with SLBC was a warm, welcoming environment for anybody, not just musicians, to come and learn about the power of song.

Gabe explained that even within the Jewish community, everyone has a different background and context, yet music is a powerful way to bring diverse people together to form connections. He gave me the example of Hinei Ma Tov, one of the first songs we teach to young children. The words translate roughly to "How good it is for us to be together." There are many variations on the tune, but no matter where we are in the world, when we hear that song we know we are amongst a community.

SLBC's leadership training is held every year in February; the next one is scheduled for February 18-20, 2018 in St Louis, Missouri. One of the founders is Rick Recht, known as a pioneer of modern Jewish rock. Other stars at SLBC include Sheldon Low (rock) and Ellen Allred (early childhood music).

Oasis of Peace

By Sarah Rohr

After the shots
went silent...

Thank you Rabbi Kosak, Rabbi Eve, JoAnn Bezodis, Laura Kosak, Cantor Bitton and the Koleinu Choir for coming together swiftly after the mass shooting in Las Vegas on October 1, 2017 to talk, sing and warm each other's souls in the light of community. The event was entitled, "After the Shots Went Silent, We Shall Sing: A Communal Response to Las Vegas."

The following poem is dedicated to all of those who were impacted by that event, and all of those who are impacted by semi-automatic gun deaths. May our lawmakers be moved by our outcries to outlaw semi-automatic weaponry, which is only used for people to kill other people.

Oasis of Peace, Las Vegas Mass Shooting

By Sarah Rohr

We are gathering.
Around the fire sculpture that the glass blower crafted, resinous hands made that gorgeous sculpture, saying with shape and light, rekindle your own eternal flames.

On the day when yet another gun-toting person waged their inner war on the outer world, Cantor Bitton sings a luscious song in our native tongue, a reverie sending ahavah to those concert goers... 58 who died, 489 who were injured, 22,000 who ducked, ran, helped and fled.

Think dear ones, of the countless family members and haverim who will hear those country songs, the sweeter soundtrack of that night; they will weep into each other's hunched shoulders at the memory of their beloveds lost.

We heard the Rabbis and their sage words reminding us of the presence of malachim (God's messengers) in the rubble and ruin.

Rabbi Kosak said, "I still get my news the old fashioned way, through the newspaper instead of social media. Repeated images of destruction tend to increase fear and traumatize us without necessarily deepening understanding."

Rabbi Posen shared her family's morning ritual and how a continual celebration of the small miracles of life's daily rhythm adds up to a reserve of ahavah when it is needed most.

We heard Laura Kosak say, "Let your children show you all of who they are, your job is to watch in wonder, making sense of this world for yourself so that they can make sense of it for themselves. Articulate in detail for them, the shadows where words fear to tread in a way that is appropriate to their age and emotional aptitude."

Rabbi Eve Posen, Laura Kosak, Rabbi David Kosak, and JoAnn Bezodis

We heard JoAnn Bezodis say, "hack your brain, we are neurologically hardwired for fear of ancient foes who left the premises long, long ago (fight, flight or freeze mechanisms). Take small actions that remind you of what is good, in this moment, in your life story. Can you feel your feet, your weight in the chair, the space underneath your nostrils? That attention reset, is mindfulness, which brings us back to this holy moment."

The glass blower's creation mimicking El Shaddai's ner tamid.

Our own Koleinu choir sent us out that evening on the ruach from their rich weaving of voices, carrying the echoes of countless sorrows, musical notes liting as stones on a grave, restful and at peace, filled with the acknowledgement of what was lost and what will live on. Hinei, Hinei.

"Teach us to treasure each day." - Limnot Yameinu.

Mazel tov to Anna Shapiro for being honored with the Stampfer Youth Award at the Stampfer Community Enrichment Award Dinner. This award recognizes our Jewish youth who have demonstrated exceptional devotion to the following causes: advancing Jewish learning; creating a stronger Jewish and overall community; and working toward a more ethical and peaceful world, embodying the spirit of tikkun olam.

Mazel tov to Susan and Seth Garber on the birth of their new grandson Kai Daniel Garber on Nov. 15. He was born to Mike and Mandy Garber in Portland, OR.

Mazel tov to Lidia and Raul Krivoy on the birth of their new grandson on Nov. 17. He was born to Erica and Keenan Davis in Atlanta, GA. The mom and the baby are all doing great.

Yihi Zichram Baruch – Our condolences to CNS members who have recently lost loved ones:

We regret having to inform you of the passing of Marjorie Kaplin (z"l), dear mother of David (Cerinda Survant) Kaplin and grandmother to Benjamin, Gwendolyn and Jonathan Kaplin.

Our condolences to Jack Wolinsky, whose brother, Louis Wolinsky (z"l) passed away on December 8 in Cleveland at the age of 96.

We regret having to inform you of the untimely passing of our member Steven Heiteen (z"l), beloved husband of Susan Kuznitsky and father of Jacob and Matthew Heiteen. Steve passed away while on vacation in Hawaii.

We regret having to inform you of the passing of our dear congregant, Tsivya Sholomovna Studinovskaya (z"l), beloved mother of Galina Smotkina and Irina Malashenok.

Mazel tov to Shlomo Farber, one of our ALIYAH Hebrew school teachers, who just won the 2017 Winter Carol Composition Competition for his arrangement of "Maaz Tsur." His piece was performed by the Portland Symphonic Choir on December 9th and 10th. Shlomo has degrees in piano performance and composition from Hebrew University in Jerusalem's Rubin Academy of Music and Dance and recently completed his MA in Cinematic Orchestration.

Thank you to everyone for helping to donate cans of sweet potatoes for the Jewish Family and Child Service Thanksgiving Food Drive. We surpassed our goal of 135 cans!

Mazel tov to Eric and Dana (Kostiner) Simpson on the opening of their new BarkZone Bethany store!

Mazel Tov to Rabbi Joshua Stampfer on the birth of his 14th great-grandchild, Emanuel Eytan, whose brit milah was held in Israel. The parents, Shlomi and Chava Stampfer, and the baby are all healthy and doing well. Pictured: Shaul Stampfer (grandparent) with the new baby.

Mazel Tov to Rabbi Stampfer, who wrote an article for the Jewish Journal titled, "Eyewitness to History: Nov. 29, 1947, in Jerusalem," about being in Jerusalem the day that the United Nations General Assembly, meeting in New York City, voted by a two-third majority to partition Palestine into a Jewish and a Arab State, leading to the declaration of the State of Israel in May 1948. To read the article, visit: jewishjournal.com/cover_story/228033/eyewitness-history-nov-29-1947-jerusalem.

We are excited to share the "double news" that Emiko and Craig Coughlin welcomed their new twins on Nov. 2, 2017. Baby girl is Yumiko Hannah Coughlin and baby boy is Kenzo Judah. These babies are adored by grandparents, Elaine Bacharach Coughlin and Jonathon Lietz, Ann Masunaga, and David and Heidi Masunaga. Proud great-grandparents are Gloria Bacharach and Sue Pye.

Koleinu: The Choir of Neveh Shalom

Our synagogue choir, Koleinu, has a rich history in the life of Neveh Shalom.

"No matter your experience," says choir manager Joni Cady, "there is room for everyone to work together building skills, repertoire, and understanding of our liturgy."

Choral Director Becca Stuhlberg is an outstanding voice teacher. Conductor and accompanist Barry Lavine also greatly adds to our ensemble with his tremendous musical talent.

If you are moved spiritually by the power of music, or if you just want a small havurah within our large congregation, please consider joining us! Koleinu meets on Monday evenings from 7:15 to 8:45pm in Stampfer Chapel. Contact: Joni Cady: joni.cady@gmail.com, 503-539-4797.

Thank You from Debbi Villani-Allen

Debbi with CNS member Hy Jackson

THANK YOU from the bottom of my heart to the staff, CNS members, and leadership for a wonderful and heartwarming retirement party.

Thank you for all the cards, emails, office visits, lunches, etc. I am overwhelmed. Thank you to Daniela and the wonderful committee that planned my party – Karen Berman, Marcy Morris, Sheila Stern, and Jeanette Philan. You did a wonderful job, and I am so appreciative of all your efforts. Thank you to all those that baked for the event; you outdid yourselves. Thank you to all those who gave such touching speeches: Fred Rothstein, Rabbi Stampfer, Rabbi Isaak, Rabbi Kosak, my son Allan, and Steve Blake. Thank you to Marci Atkins and Priscilla Kostiner for your fun, creative, sentimental, and lively song presentation. That was amazing! I want to thank Alan Blank, past President and Treasurer, who flew in from Washington, D.C. just for my party and flew back that same night. That meant so much to me!!

Thank you, Neveh Shalom leadership and members, for the lovely artwork by Jonathan Lietz, and for the cash. It was very generous and thoughtful and I am very grateful to you all. There are not enough words to express my love and appreciation to and for you all. I am honored to be able to have worked for Neveh Shalom all these years and call so many of you friends. I am humbled by your kindness and generosity. THANK YOU!

Long-time Supporters of the Visual Arts Donate DVD Collection to Feldstein Library

By Kaiya Goldhammer, Librarian of the Feldstein Library

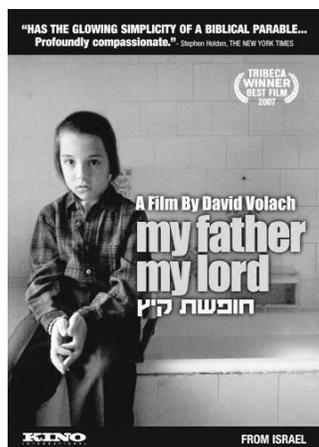

Long time supporters of the visual arts in Portland, CNS members Paul and Joan Sher donated a collection of over 300 Jewish-themed DVDs and Blu Rays from their personal collection. This collection has immense value for our entire community. Films will support programming throughout the synagogue, educational needs of teachers, and the learning and enjoyment of members.

Neveh Shalom is so excited to share the Sher Film Collection with our community. You are invited to come to the Feldstein Library to check out a movie today!

Here are some of the gems available for borrowing:

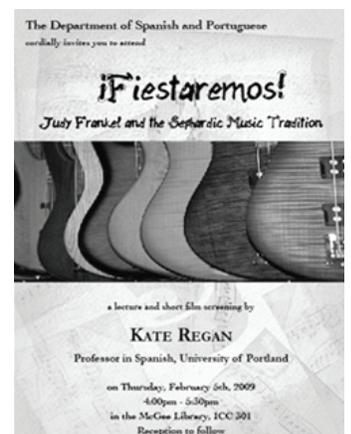

Paul and Joan Sher

My Father My Lord (2008) observes the severe family life of Abraham; his wife, Esther; and their young son, Menachem. My Father My Lord has the glowing simplicity and force of a biblical parable.

Fiestaremos (2008) explores Judy Frankel's dedication to preserving Sephardic music and songs. Interviews with Frankel, musical excerpts, and performances offer an intimate look at one of the leading collectors and practitioners of Sephardic folk music.

Trembling Before G-d: The Hidden Lives of Gay and Lesbian Orthodox and Hasidic Jews (2001) is an unprecedented feature documentary that shatters assumptions about faith, sexuality, and religious fundamentalism.

Hill 24 Doesn't Answer (1955). It is 1948. Four young Zionists are assigned to defend strategic Hill 24 outside Jerusalem in order to maintain access to the besieged city during Israel's War of Independence.

Get your Game On at CNS!

Team CNS! We are excited to celebrate Neveh Shalom's 2018 Get Your Game On! fundraising gala on Saturday, January 27th starting at 6pm. Auction chairs, Mia Birk and Glen Coblens, along with countless volunteers and CNS staff, have worked tirelessly to put together an event that will lift your spirits and make you proud to be part of our dedicated kehilla.

We have a great array of silent auction items, one-of-a-kind live auction items, a special appearance by former Globe Trotter, Pee Wee Harrison, mouth-watering food, signature drinks, and much more!

This is your opportunity to help Neveh Shalom raise the necessary funds to keep our programs thriving and flourishing. While many nonprofit organizations such as hospitals, schools, universities, etc. rely on grants to help them meet their operating budgets, for the most part, religious institutions are excluded from grant funding and count on the support of individual donors to meet their financial needs. No matter what level you can participate in, all financial contributions are welcomed and needed. And, if you are unable to join us the night of the auction, you can still be a part of it by making a donation or having a friend bid for you via proxy.

Glen Coblens, Mia Birk, and Family

Treat yourself to a great night out with your friends and show your team spirit for TEAM CNS!

To purchase tickets and for more info, visit: nevehshalom.org/auction2018.

Thursday, February 8, 2018, 7:00pm

American Jewish Engagement with Israel

How is our American Jewish connection with Israel evolving? What are the challenges and opportunities? Join us for a compelling discussion, framed by the insights of Dr. Yehuda Kurtzer, President of the Shalom Hartman Institute of North America.

Thursday, March 22, 2018, 7:00pm

Screening of the Documentary Film:
"The Gatekeepers"

Join us in watching and discussing this 2012 documentary featuring interviews with all surviving former heads of Shin Bet at that time. The interviewees shed light on the controversy surrounding the contested territories in the aftermath of the Six Day War. We'll also explore a range of Israeli responses from positive critical reviews to those who felt the film reinforced an anti-Israeli narrative.

The Next 35 Years of Social Change in Israel: New Leadership for a New Era

Come hear New Israel Fund Executive Director in Israel Mickey Gitzin. As a liberal, openly gay son of Russian immigrants, Mickey Gitzin recognizes both the great leaps forward that Israel has made in advancing equality for all its citizens and the challenges that remain. He is one of a new wave of young Israeli leaders bringing an intersectional approach to the issues of the day.
